

ABSTRACT

A display device includes a substrate and a conductor pattern forming electrodes of the display device, wherein the conductor pattern substantially covers the corresponding part of the substrate when viewed perpendicularly from the substrate. Beneficially, a width of partitioning paths between the parts of the conductor pattern forming the electrodes are minimized. Thereby, the conductor pattern minimizes the electrical resistance of the electrodes of the device.